NextGen® Office is Only EHR to Empower Podiatrists with Community Data at Point of Care

ATLANTA--(BUSINESS WIRE)--Jul. 27, 2022-- NextGen Healthcare, Inc. (Nasdaq: NXGN), a leading provider of innovative, cloud-based healthcare technology solutions, will demonstrate its award-winning NextGen® Office, the only Electronic Health Record (EHR) integrated into the American Podiatric Medical Association (APMA) Registry, at the group's annual conference July 28 to 31 in Orlando. NextGen Healthcare is a founding partner of the APMA Registry, which provides clinically relevant insights to NextGen Healthcare clients.

The APMA Registry aggregates patient data and provides analytics on podiatry trends to assist providers in making decisions at the point of care. Recently, the APMA announced an expanded partnership with NextGen Healthcare to leverage clinical data and best practices using the united APMA Registry.

"NextGen Healthcare's partnership with the APMA delivers on our commitment to ease the burden for small practices and specialties such as podiatry," said Dr. Robert Murry, chief medical officer at NextGen Healthcare. "Our solutions deliver operational efficiencies and streamlined workflows for providers, and integration with the APMA Registry leads to better patient outcomes."

NextGen® Office, the company's cloud-based small practice EHR and practice management (PM) solution, earned the No. 1 honor in the Small Practice PM/EMR segment (10 or fewer physicians) in the 2022 Best in KLAS: Software & Services Report.

The solution is a preferred EHR for APMA members, as it offers clinical workflows specific to podiatry. Using NextGen Office, podiatrists can touch, talk or type encounter notes directly into the clinical documentation. The solution empowers patients to schedule appointments electronically, request prescription refills, and schedule virtual visits. Importantly, it also allows the care team to connect with each other through direct messaging and referral exchange.
